GENEALOGY.

FLOURNOY GENEALOGY—Owing to the sickness of Mr. Flournoy Rivers, the compiler of the Flournoy Genealogy, which has been running in our pages, the concluding instalment of the genealogy is delayed, and will not appear until the January number of the Magazine.

THE CARR FAMILY.

CONTRIBUTED BY G. C. BROADHEAD, OF COLUMBIA, MO.

The following notes have been carefully collected and may be relied on as correct. They chiefly relate to the family and descendants of Garland Carr, who was the son of John Carr, of Bear Castle, and include his descendants down to A. D. 1895.

I have in my possession Doddridge's Family Expositor, 6 quarto volumes, London 1756. The volumes appear to have been owned first by John Carr, of Bear Castle, Louisa County, Va., then owned by his son Garland Carr, who sometime between 1810 and 1818, gave them to his daughter Mary Winston Carr (afterwards Mary W. Broadhead, my mother). They remained in her possession until 1836, A. D., when moving to Missouri the books were left in the possession of her brother, Colonel James O. Carr, of Albemarle County, Va. They remained in the possession of his family until July 1894, when R. Henry Carr, son of Colonel J. O. Carr, sent them to the writer, remembering that they had once belonged to my mother. They are particularly valuable in that there is a Register of Births, &c., written on a "Fly leaf" of a volume, and in the handwriting of John Carr, of Bear Castle, as shown by the wording as follows:

"John Carr, son of Thomas and Mary Carr, born 25th December, 1706.

"Thomas Carr, son of John and Mary Carr, born 25th November, 1735.

"Mary Carr, wife to John Carr, departed this life 10th March, 1736-7.

"Barbara Overton, daughter to James and Elizabeth Overton, born 20th April, 1720.

"John Carr, married to Barbara Overton, 27th December, 1737.

"My father (John Carr's father) Thomas Carr, departed this life 29th May, 1738, aged 59 years.

"John Carr, son to John and Barbara Carr, born 1738, died 3d November, 1747.

"My mother-in-law Elizabeth Overton, departed this life 19th November, 1739.

"James Carr, son to John and Barbara Carr, born 20th August, 1740, and died 6th September, following.

"James Carr, son of John and Barbara Carr, born 15th November, 1741, departed this life 10th of October, 1747.

"Dabney Carr, son of John and Barbara Carr, born 26th October, 1743.

"Samuel Carr, son of John and Barbara Carr, born 6th of January, 1745-6.

"Thomas Overton departed this life 29th September, 1745.

"Elizabeth Carr, daughter to John and Barbara Carr, born 28th December, 1747.

"My mother, Mary Carr, departed this life 7th of September, 1748, aged 60.

"Captain James Overton departed this life 18th June, 1749.

"John Carr, son of John and Barbara Carr, born 11th August, 1750, departed this life 5th April, 1753.

"Garland Carr, son of John and Barbara Carr, born 15th of July, 1754.

"Mary Carr, daughter to John and Barbara Carr, born 14th September, 1756.

"Sarah Carr, daughter to John and Barbara Carr, born 25th September, 1758, and departed this life 12th of May, following."

The following is continued in a different handwriting:

"John Carr, son of Thomas and Mary Carr, departed this life 17th day of June, 1778, aged 72 years.

"Dabney Carr, son of John and Barbara Carr, died 16th of May, 1773, aged 30 years.

"Samuel Carr, son of John and Barbara Carr, departed this life 16th day of May, 1777, aged 32 years.

"Barbara Carr, wife to John Carr, departed this life December, 1794, in the 74th year of her age."

Henry Carr, of Virginia, informs me that the first wife of John Carr, of Bear Castle, was Mary Dabney; his second wife, Barbara Overton, also stated by John Carr. Samuel Carr, son of John Carr, was a captain in the Continental Navy.

THE DESCENDANTS OF GARLAND CARR.

Garland Carr, son of John Carr, of Bear Castle, Louisa county, Virginia, was born at Bear Castle 10th of July, 1754, and died at Gale Hill, Albemarle county, Virginia, October, 1837. He was married to Mary Winston in 1783. Their children were:

Dr. Frank Carr, born 4th February, 1784. Daniel Ferrill Carr, born 10th December, 1786. Barbara Ann Carr, born 14th February, 1789. Elizabeth Carr, born 21st August, 1791. James Overton Carr, born 6th

October, 1793. Mary Winston Carr, born at Bentwar, 28th April, 1796. Dr. Frank Carr, was born at Bear Castle, the other children of Garland Carr were born in Albemarle county.

Dr. Frank Carr's first wife was Virginia Ferrill. They had one son Peter, who married Lydia Laura Lewis. Peter Carr was a sound lawyer, a gentlemen of culture and of influence. He was a member of State Senate of Missouri, and died in Pike county Missouri, in 1859. His wife possessed a rare poetic gift, and was the author of many beautiful poems. She died in the South about 1864.

Dr. Frank Carr's 2d wife was Miss Maria Morris, and they had one child, Francis Edward Garland Carr. F. E. G. Carr married Sally Watson Carr, daughter of Colonel Samuel Carr, and had one child, George Watson Carr, now living in Texas.

Dr. Frank Carr died about the year 1843. F. E. G. Carr, died in Charlottesville, Va., in 1893.

THE FAMILY OF DANIEL FERRILL CARR.

Daniel F. Carr married Emily Terrill. Their children were William Garland Carr, Clarissa Carr, Patsy W. Carr, and Dolly T. Carr. The latter and Clarissa were never married, but were popular and sensible ladies.

William Garland Carr married Charlotte Duke, and their children were James, Ferrill, Nannie, Charlotte, Lucy, Emily and Patty. William G. Carr has been dead over 10 years. His widow Mrs. Charlotte Carr resides with her son Daniel Ferrill Carr, near Sooba, Kemper county, Mississippi, as also does Emily. Charlotte Carr married Dr. J. Cochran of Fauquier county, Va. They have a son in the army and a daughter Charlotte married to Mr. Cochran (not related to Dr. Cochran) and two smaller children. Lucy Carr married Mr. Stuart who lived only a few years. Mrs. Lucy Stuart until within the past month was teacher in the Young Ladies College at Roanoke, Va. She was taken ill with pneumonia and died within a week, February, 1895, leaving two interesting daughters just grown, Eleanor and Mary. They now reside with their relatives in Mississippi. The other children of William Garland Carr are all dead.

Patsy Carr, daughter of Daniel F. Carr, married George W. Clive, a Scotchman and an able school teacher. They resided in Cincinnati, Ohio, for a number of years, and died in Texas within the past twenty-five years, leaving a son George and two daughters, Kate who married Mr. Murry, and Mary Waters who married Dr. Allison. Dr. Allison has now been dead a number of years, and Mrs. Mary Waters Allison resides with her two sons and two daughters at Midland, Texas, one of her sons being sheriff of the county.

BARBARA ANN CARR, daughter of Garland Carr, married her first cousin, Jonathan Boucher Carr, a son of Overton Carr. Their children were Chloe Lee, born in 1813; William Kimbrough, born in 1811; Mary Ann, born in 1815; Garland Overton, born 1817; Dabney Terrill, born in 1819; Ellen, born 1821; Frank, born 1823; Maria Elizabeth, born 1825; James Ferrill, born 1828, died about 1841.

William Kimbrough in early life was in business in Columbus, Ohio. He died in Philadelphia, leaving one son and two daughters. Chloe Lee Carr married three times, and died in California. One of her husbands was a grandson of Daniel Boone, and died in a quicksand. Mary Ann married Hugh Minor, of Albemarle county, Virginia, and raised five sons and three daughters. Her daughter Patty Minor, married Thomas W. Gilmer. George married a daughter of Lawrence Carr, of Kanawha, the older son of Colonel Samuel Carr. Garland O. Carr, son of J. Boucher Carr, died on the plains en route to Mexican war. Dabney Terrill Carr married Eliza English, of New York, and they reside at Bay City, Michigan, with their two daughters Nelly and Mary, who both married Fitzhugh brothers, of Virginia. Ellen Carr, daughter of J. Boucher Carr, married Dr. Benjamin Todd, who was killed by bushwhackers in 1862, in Lincoln county, Missouri. Mrs. Ellen Todd died a few years ago in California. She had three sons and three daughters. The oldest, Dr. Overton Todd, is married, and resides at Batchtown, Calhoun county, Illinois. Birdie Winston Todd and her sister, Mrs. Laura T. Collins, reside at Corsicana, Texas. Mollie Todd, daughter of Ellen B. Todd, married William O. Todd, and they reside in California. Price Todd resides in Texas.

Dr. Frank Carr, son of J. B. Carr, married Ella Chandler, who died in 1894, at Nevada, Missouri, her husband having died some years before. They had two sons and one daughter, Nannie, who married Dr. Leon Ridgeway, and they now live in Kansas City, Missouri. Frank Carr, son of Dr. Frank Carr, is married, and lives in Nevada, Missouri, where he is cashier of a bank.

Maria E. Carr, daughter of Jonathan B. Carr, married Dr. James Douglass, and they now reside at Batchtown, Calhoun county, Illinois. They have two children, Benjamin, born in 1860, who has been married, but his wife is now dead, leaving a son named Gordon. Benjamin Douglass now lives in the State of Nevada. Dr. and Mrs. Douglass also have a daughter, Maria Lee, married to Dr. Adams, of St. Louis. They have a daughter, Helen Douglass.

Mrs. Ellen Todd and Mrs. Mary Ann Minor, daughters of Jonathan B. Carr, had the most beautiful voices for singing, and Mrs. Minor could easily fill a room so that the vibrations of the air could be readily felt.

Jonathan Boucher Carr was a very diffident man; he was educated for the law, and said to be well versed in law, but too diffident to appear in court. He died in Lincoln county, Missouri, about 1859.

Elizabeth Carr, daughter of Garland Carr, married the Rev. John Paxton, of New Jersey, and has been dead many years.

JAMES O. CARR, son of Garland Carr, married Mary Clark. Colonel J. O. Carr died in Albemarle county, Virginia, in 1862, aged 69 years. His wife died many years before. He had six children, of whom three are now living in Amherst county, Virginia, viz: Richard Henry, born in 1823; Hetty, born in 1825, and Jane Margaret, born in 1832. Colonel J. O. Carr's other children were Virginia, who died in 1893, aged 74, and Elizabeth and Ann, who died some years before.

THE FAMILY OF ACHILLES BROADHEAD.

Mary Winston Carr, youngest daughter of Garland Carr, was married to Achilles Broadhead, November, 1817. Their children were James Overton Broadhead, born May 29th, 1819, in Albemarle county, Va. Mary Ann Broadhead, born July 28, 1821, in Albemarle county, Va. Garland Carr Broadhead, born October 30th, 1827, in Albemarle county, Va. Elizabeth Maria Broadhead, born August 25th, 1829, in Albemarle county, Va. William Ferrill Broadhead, born November 23d, 1836, in St. Charles county, Mo. Achilles Broadhead moved to St. Charles county, Mo., in 1836, and died there October 4th, 1853, aged 64. He was born in Albemarle county, Va., and held offices of trust as surveyor and magistrate in both Virginia and Missouri.

Mary Winston Broadhead died in St. Charles county, Mo., February 12th, 1852.

James Overton Broadhead when at home resides in St. Louis, Mo. He is now U. S. minister to Switzerland. He married Miss Mary Snowdon Dorsey, a daughter of Colonel Edward Dorsey, of Pike county, Missouri, in 1847. They have three children, Charles S., a promising lawyer of St. Louis, Missouri; Mary W., married to William Horton, of St. Louis, and they have three children; and Nannie Dorsey Broadhead, rarely gifted and of marked intelligence and culture. James O. Broadhead has had an honorable career, three times member of the Missouri Legislature, once a member of Congress, at one time U. S. District Attorney, and three times a member of Missouri State Constitutional Conventions, the last in 1875, which framed the present Constitution of Missouri. He was also a member of the Charter Convention to frame a special government for the city of St. Louis.

Mary Ann Broadhead, daughter to Achilles and Mary W. Broadhead, married John H. Newby, who died in Texas in 1888. Mrs. Newby died in Clayton, Missouri, July 3d, 1890. Their children are Dr. J. B. Newby, of St. Louis, who married Libby North, and they have two daughters, Mary and Florence, now grown young ladies.

William Garland Newby, son of John H. and Mary Ann Newby, is cashier of a bank in Fort Worth, Texas. He married Miss Etta Price, formerly of Mississippi.

Garland Carr Broadhead, son of Achilles and Mary W. Broadhead, married Marion Wallace Wright, in Pleasant Hill, Missouri, December 21st, 1864. Marion W. Broadhead was born in Pleasant Hill, Missouri, April 9th, 1843, and died in Pleasant Hill, Missouri, November 24th, 1883. Garland C. Broadhead married a second time, June 18th, 1890, to Miss Victoria Regina Royall, who was born in Halifax county, Virginia, in 1841.

The children of Garland C. and Marion W. Broadhead are Mary West, born in Pleasant Hill, Missouri, April 28th, 1866; Garland Carr Broadhead, born in Pleasant Hill January 4th, 1873; Marion Gertrude, born in Pleasant Hill May 21st, 1877, and Harry Howard, born in Pleasant Hill, Missouri, October 29th, 1879. Mary West Broadhead was married to William E. Whitsitt in Pleasant Hill, Missouri, December 18th, 1884. They have one son, Garland, born January, 1893.

Garland C. Broadhead, son of Achilles Broadhead, was Assistant Geologist of Missouri 1857-1861; Assistant Geologist of Illinois 1868; Assistant Geologist of Missouri 1871-1873; State Geologist of Missouri 1873-1875; Juror of Mines and Geology Centennial 1876; Special Agent Tenth Census investigating Quarry Industry of Kansas and Missouri; Member of Missouri River Commission 1884-1895; Professor of Geology Missouri State University 1887-1895.

Elizabeth Maria Broadhead, daughter of Achilles Broadhead, was married to Dr. H. B. Logan, of St. Louis, Missouri, 16th of March, 1875, and died in St. Louis July 2d, 1892, leaving a large circle of loving friends.

William F. Broadhead, youngest son of Achilles and Mary W. Broadhead, is a lawyer of Clayton, Missouri. He married Miss Rosalie Weber, and they have the following children: Rosalie, Overton, Archibald, William and James.

Colonel Sam Carr, who was grandson of John Carr, of Bear Castle, was the son of Dabney Carr. His first wife was Eleanor Boucher, his first cousin, and she was sister of Jonathan B. Carr and also of Elizabeth Carr, who married Judge Dabney Carr. Colonel Sam Carr's second wife was Maria Dabney, daughter of William Dabney.

Colonel Sam Carr's son, Dabney Overton, was killed in battle in South America, fighting with Simon Bolivar for the freedom of South American colonies.

Colonel Sam Carr died in Kanawha, West Virginia, in 1855. Only one son of Colonel Sam Carr is now living, Colonel George Watson Carr, of Roanoke, Virginia, a son by his second wife. Colonel George Carr's first wife was Miss Emma Gilmer Watts, of Roanoke, Virginia, to whom he was married in 1860. They have a son, William Watts, residing in Louisville, Kentucky, and a daughter, Betty, married to Donald McDonald, also of Louisville, Kentucky. Colonel George Carr's first wife has been dead over twenty years, and in 1876 he married Miss Pinnie Laws, of Hampton, Virginia. They have one daughter, Sally.

Judge William C. Carr came to St. Louis soon after the Louisiana purchase. He erected the first brick house in St. Louis in 1813. In 1817 he was appointed by the Territorial Legislature one of the trustees of St. Louis Public Schools, along with Thomas H. Benton and others. He was a prominent candidate for Governor in 1825. In 1826 was appointed circuit judge, and filled the position with honor and credit, yet politicians preferred false charges against him. These charges were carefully examined, and the Judge was honorably acquitted. He soon after retired to private life. He is described as being neatly dressed, and always conducted himself as a perfect gentleman. His circuit embraced a large area, extending over nearly one-third of Southern Missouri.

Among old papers I find one in the handwriting of Dr. Frank Carr, of Albemarle county, Virginia, containing a notice of Judge Dabney Carr, his death and subsequent resolutions, as follows:

Departed this life on the 8th of January, 1837, at his residence near this city, the Honorable Dabney Carr, one of the Judges of the Court of Appeals. Judge Carr was born April, 1773, about one month before the death of his father. He was brought up by his excellent mother, the sister of Mr. Jefferson, and at maturity commenced the practice of the law in Albemarle, where he became distinguished for his sound sense and professional ability, and eminently remarkable for his diligence, punctuality and fidelity. In 1811 he was promoted to the office of Chancellor of the Winchester district, which he held until the spring of 1824, when he was elected to fill the vacancy in the Court of Appeals created by the death of the Hon. William Fleming. Upon the adoption of the new Constitution, the seats of all the judges having been vacated, and a new election taking place, he was elected to a seat on the Bench of the newly organized court, which he adorned for more than twelve years by his eminent virtues, his great learning and his sound and judicious opinions. His assiduity was without example, and the failure of his fine constitution is fairly set down to his uncommon labors. It has been his good fortune to be rarely absent from his seat from indisposition, and even in his last illness he has lost but one week of the term. The first thing that struck you on an acquaintance with Judge Carr was his native modesty, which a commerce with the world of sixty years had never abated. In conversation you knew not which most to admire, the soundness and purity of his opinions, or the deference, approaching even to humility, with which they were ever advanced. In argument, though cogent and earnest, he was never betrayed into a sophism, nor tempted to pass the boundaries marked out by forbearance and moderation. His gentleness of disposition and suavity of manners were on all occasions conspicuous. They were not confined to his family or brethren of the Bench, with whom his intercourse was delightfully harmonious. They won for him the regard even of strangers, upon his first introduction, while the substantial good qualities of his head and heart never failed to rivet the affections which had first been the result of his engaging demeanor. The virtues indeed seemed to cluster around his character. In all his relations he was distinguished by truth, fidelity and constancy, for firmness and manly fortitude, for scrupulous honor, laudable prudence, exact punctuality, and a faithful discharge of every duty. His plan of life was systematic and steadfastly pursued, for it was formed upon upright and wide reflected principles, which he adopted with the utmost care, and adhered to with unwavering tenacity.

As a public officer filling the highest judicial stations in the State, his untiring industry, his sedulous attention, his patient investigation, his steadfastness of principle and his stern rebuke of vice were above all praise, and the virtues of his heart were not more conspicuous, than the ability and learning which were ever displayed in his judicial opinions. These form his monument, a monument more enduring than brass, more lasting than marble. The volumes which contain his opinions will go down from generation to generation as the repositories of our jurisprudence, and posterity will find there an imperishable memorial of the greatness and goodness of this admirable man.

The mind of Judge Carr was clear, vigorous and accurate, his style was pure, classical and strong; his learning was extensive, well digested and profound, his acquirements in every field of Literature considerable. With the ancient classics and the best writers of our own language he was largely and intimately acquainted, and one of his greatest enjoyments was to spend a leisure moment with his favorite Cicero, of whose works he was eminently fond. With a mind thus stored, it was not wonderful that his society was the delight of his friends, and accordingly all who were fortunate enough to enjoy it sought it with avidity. In his private relations, indeed, his life was truly lovely; always urbane, never censorious, always benevolent, never stern; among the foremost in the liberal hospitality of a gentleman to his friends, warm and devoted, and as a husband, father and brother, never surpassed. In his last moments all these gentle and amiable qualities beamed forth with conspicuous brightness. It was an affecting evidence of his tenderness that he desired that his last look might dwell upon the amiable partner, who for nearly forty years had shared his cares and his fortunes, and whose privilege it had been to enjoy for such a length of days a happy union with one of the noblest of men. He met death with the fortitude and resignation which might well have been expected from such a man in the evening of a well spent life. He ordered the curtains of his windows to be withdrawn only a few hours before his death, (for he retained his senses to the last) and looking out upon the bright world that lay before him, he exclaimed "Beautiful! beautiful! all is bright, and now I want to go up. But it is not fit that we should be impatient at leaving so beautiful a world as this, we must wait our time," and accordingly, though his last moments became more distressing, and led him to wish repeatedly that the struggle was over, his patience and calmness never for a moment deserted him. To such a man we may point the rising generation and say to them, in the language of his favorite poet, respicere exemplaritae morumque jubebo.

At a meeting of the surviving judges of the Court of Appeals, the members of the Bar and officers of the court, on Monday, the 9th day January, 1837, on motion of Henry StG. Tucker, Esq., Francis T. Brooke, Esq., was called to the chair, and Sydney S. Baxter was appointed Secretary. Benjamin W. Leigh announced the death of Dabney Carr, Esq., one of the Judges of the Court of Appeals, and moving the following preamble and resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

The surviving Judges, the members of the Bar and officers of the Court of Appeals, assembled on the occasion of the death of the Hon. Dabney Carr, have to express not only their sense of the public loss sustained in this afflicting dispensation of Providence, but deep and lasting regret peculiar to themselves. In the judicial stations, first of Chancellor and then of Judge of this Court, which the deceased for so many years filled and adorned, his learning and ability, his indefatigable industry and devotion to his official duties, the entire exemption from every passion that might warp the judgment, the ardent love and zeal for pure justice, and the perfect fairness of mind which he brought to the decision of every cause, as well as the integrity of his life and the spotless purity of his morals and conduct, were known to his country and commanded universal respect, esteem and confidence. But to his brethren of the Bench, to the members of the Bar, and to the officers of the Court he was not only an object of respect, esteem and confidence—he was endeared to them by the gentler virtues he displayed in the constant intercourse of business, by the evenness and suavity of his temper, the amiable simplicity of his manners, his unaffected modesty, his unassuming dignity, and above all his kindness of heart, flowing in one uninterrupted current for a series of years, and flowing to us all. He has not left an enemy behind him, and among us he has left those who mourn him as a brother or a father.

Resolved, That in testimony of respect to the memory of the deceased, the Judges, the members of the Bar and the officers of the Court will wear the usual badge of mourning one month. That the Chairman and Secretary be requested to communicate a copy of these proceedings to the widow and family of the deceased, and to assure them of our deep sympathy in their distress.

That they be also desired to lay before the Court of Appeals the request of this meeting that a copy of these proceedings be entered on the order-book of the Court, and that they also cause these proceedings to be published.

On motion, the meeting adjourned to attend the funeral of Judge Carr.

FRANCIS T. BROOKE, Chairman.

S. S. BAXTER, Secretary.

FUNERAL OF JUDGE CARR.

Mr. Stanard said since the adjournment of the House on Saturday, an event had occurred which involved a most serious public and private loss. Judge Carr is no more, and, said Mr. Stanard, I am not exaggerating when I say that scarcely one member of the community could have been taken from us who could have been more illy spared. I think the loss of a gentleman so estimable in all the relations of life—of a magistrate so upright, so able, so impartial—offers an occasion on which the members of this House may, with propriety, suspend the performance of their duties to offer at his grave testimonials of the respect which his virtues and abilities deserve. Under this impression, he moved that the House adopt the following preamble and resolution:

It being announced to the House of Delegates that since its adjournment on Saturday, Dabney Carr, Esq., one of the judges of the Court of Appeals, has departed this life, an event by which the country is deprived of a most estimable citizen, and an able and upright magistrate; and the House of Delegates profoundly regretting the melancholy event, and being desirous to offer a suitable testimonial of respect to his memory; therefore,

Resolved, That the members of this House will attend the funeral of the late Dabney Carr, Esq., to take place this day at one o'clock.

This preamble and resolution were unanimously agreed to, and, on motion of Mr. Stanard, the House adjourned.
